

Sakeology Course Master's program • Doctoral program

Educational programs integrating humanities and science to learn interdisciplinary field on sake

Development of persons who can bring innovation for social problem solving and the new value creation, with overviewing a wide variety of different fields of sake including raw materials, production, sales, consumption, culture, history, tradition, and health besides own specified area.

Foster human resources with interdisciplinary knowledges

Diverse employment opportunities

ex.) Sake industry including brewing, distribution, sales, and trading companies, R&D positions in various fields, civil services, research in the context of academia, consulting, and emerging industry fields including business creation, etc.

Degree examination (integrated degree program examination system)

Doctoral program

To be established in April 2023

Special Courses in Sakeology Course

Advanced Sakeology I, II

Sakeology International Graduate Study / Advanced Seminars

Research Advising Courses / Research Seminar Courses

Field-related Courses, etc.

- Advance research (specialized fields)
- Interdisciplinary thesis advising system

Graduate students, Niigata university

Students from other colleges

International students

A member of society

Graduate School Entrance Examination

Set a research theme in doctoral course

Master's program

Special Courses in Sakeology Course

Sakeology Introduction I~V

Sakeology Advanced Practice
Sakeology Basic Practice

Sakeology Seminars

Research / Seminar Courses

Field-related Courses, etc.

- Focus on exploratory research
- "Interdisciplinary extensive learning" as an integrated humanities and science
- Special Courses in Sakeology Course: Lectures, practical training, and seminars that integrate the humanities and science focus on sake

Basic courses: data science, ethics education, communication, internship, etc.

Graduate School Entrance Examination

A member of society

International students

Students from other colleges

Undergraduate students, Niigata university (Humanities and Social Sciences, Natural Science)